PREVENTION

Prevention Is The Best Medicine

Blue Springs Animal Hospital monitors local risks for contagious diseases and parasites and makes recommendations to protect pets in our area, while avoiding over-vaccination.

- » Canine DHPP, Feline DRCP: Diseases which cause serious illness or death. Administered at sequential ages with the final series booster at 4-6 months of age. Boostered again in 1 year, then every 2-3 years.
- » Canine Leptospirosis: Deadly disease which is contagious to people as well as dogs. Administered twice during the puppy series and repeated yearly.
- » Canine Bordetella: Contagious respiratory infection. Given once in the puppy series with boosters every 6 mos. Separated from the DHPP to reduce immune stress.
- » Canine Influenza Virus: Contagious respiratory infection which causes serious pneumonia in 20% of infected dogs. Given twice in the puppy series with boosters yearly.
- » Feline Leukemia: Virus which attacks the immune system and may be associated with cancer. Given twice to kittens, repeated in 6 mos, then yearly. Separated from the DRCP to reduce immune stress.
- » Rabies: Administered once to puppies or kittens and repeated every 1-3 years.
- » Intestinal Parasites: Most puppies and kittens have parasites. An initial deworming targets Rounds and Hooks which may be too immature to shed the eggs seen on a fecal test. Fecal tests detect other parasites which may not appear until older ages. Fecal tests should be repeated 3-4 times during the puppy series and every 6-12 months thereafter.
- » Heartworms: Deadly parasites spread by mosquitos which infect the heart of dogs and cats. Prevention is needed in this area year around.

 Other vaccines such as Lyme vaccine may be recommended depending on exposure.
